At the Smithsonian Mason
School of Conservation
Front Royal, Virginia

Located in the beautiful foothills of the Shenandoah Mountains in Front Royal, Virginia, the center is just sixty miles southwest of Washington, D.C. The newly constructed SMSC Academic Commons features a state of the art classroom and lab facility, an intimate living-learning residential center, and a full-service dining hall.

Reserve your private room with a view, and get the space and time you need to complete your dissertation or other academic project.

When you want to take a break, our unique location offers you access to a variety of recreational activities. Front Royal, Virginia, known as the "Canoe Capital" of the world, is the gateway to the Sky-line Drive, the Appalachian Trail, and many other outdoor activities. Civil War history abounds.
